

Before you leave Singapore.

A practical starting guide for Singapore ordinary passport holders planning a visit to China.

Source checked 17 October 2026 · preview edition

ORDINARY SINGAPORE PASSPORT

30 days

Visa exemption for eligible visits

The bilateral agreement permits stays of no more than 30 days. Eligibility depends on your passport and purpose of travel, not ethnicity or Singapore residence.

A short checklist

01 Confirm your entry eligibility

Check current official guidance for your passport, intended activity and length of stay. Where the purpose needs prior approval, or the stay exceeds 30 days, arrange the appropriate visa in advance. Ask the relevant authorities how your planned medical visit is treated.

02 Confirm appointments before flights

An initial plan and indicative quote may change after examination. Confirm visit dates, expected review needs and whether separate trips may be necessary.

03 Agree on the practical arrangements

Discuss the arrival city, accommodation location, pickup and accompaniment scope. Medical fees go directly to the healthcare provider; coordination fees are agreed separately.

04 Prepare for follow-up at home

Ask the treating clinician about reviews, care instructions and who to contact after returning home. Check any relevant insurance coverage directly with your insurer.

Official sources

China Ministry of Foreign Affairs · bilateral agreement, 25 January 2024 ↗ (https://www.mfa.gov.cn/wjbzfwfpt/kzx/tzgg/202401/t20240125_11233014.html)

Singapore Ministry of Foreign Affairs · China travel information ↗ (<https://www.mfa.gov.sg/travelling-overseas/travel-advisories-notice-and-visa-information/china/>)

The agreement took effect on 9 February 2024. Rules can change; check the official sources before travel. China Dental Journey does not make immigration decisions or guarantee admission.

China Dental Journey coordinates appointments and travel, not medical diagnosis or treatment. Clinical decisions rest with the treating healthcare provider. Medical fees are paid directly to that provider.